

Screw Motor

Electrons travel from the negative side of the battery, through the wire and the magnet, and up the screw.

As the electrons in the wire approach the center of the magnet, the Lorentz force they feel is directed out of the page. The corresponding force exerted on the near edge of the magnet is into the page, causing the magnet to turn.

